The Value of a Professional Service

In the past five years 15,627 Wisconsin teachers have enrolled with the University of Wisconsin Extension Division for correspondence-study courses. Last year alone 3,492 teachers, about one-eighth the membership of the state-wide profession, sent in thousands of correspondence-study assignments, assignments distributed over a wide range of professional and cultural subjects selected from the Extension Division's list of more than 400 courses.

Why such unusual interest on the part of this large professional group? BECAUSE THESE TEACHERS HAVE COME TO REALIZE THE ADVANTAGE AND THE ECONOMY OF ACCREDITED, INDIVIDUALLY-ADAPTED CORRESPONDENCE STUDIES IN PROMOTING A SUCCESSFUL CAREER.

And Its Personal Angle . . .

Is additional time in college, for financial or other reasons, hard for you to manage?

Do you wish additional credits to qualify you for an advanced certificate, increased salary, or a higher position?

Begin College Work Now

Credits toward a college education can be earned at home. One-half the credits required for graduation from the University may be secured through University Extension correspondence courses. These credits may be transferred to other colleges. The plan is simple. When the student enrolls, the lesson assignments, each containing a set of questions, are sent to him by mail. He writes the answers to the questions and sends them to the University where they are marked and returned with suggestions, criticisms, and words of encouragement. Each student proceeds at his own pace unhampered by others. The examination is written at the end of the course under the local high school principal and graded by an instructor in the University. Each student is judged upon the merit of his own work. Since he must make a written report on each lesson assignment in the course, the knowledge he gains is complete and thorough. The self-directed habit the correspondence student acquires of studying at home is useful to him later in college work. Through correspondence study a college education may be begun in any city, town, or village reached by the mails.

Graduates of accredited high schools, who have fulfilled college entrance requirements, may enroll in the freshman correspondence courses listed below without examination and take them for credit toward a university degree.

Now Is the Time The wise use of spare time is the best investment. Many high school graduates are finding it difficult or impossible to secure employment. A continued course of study, looking to the fulfillment of plans for a career, will settle the problem, for many young people, of using their leisure time to the best advantage during unemployment periods like the present. It is possible for the correspondence-study student to receive more real individual instruction through the written page than can be

Course 2, An Introduction to Music, is recommended for teachers to whom a knowledge of music and its appreciation are useful in the schoolroom. The course is of special benefit to teachers who have had little opportunity for training in the field of music. It furnishes the background that is so often lacking in those who desire to share in the cultural art of music.

The work is accomplished through analysis and a discussion of selected material (textbooks and both vocal and instrumental compositions), as well as through certain exercises to be worked out and sent in for correction and instruction.

Instruction Fee, $10. The total additional cost of the text, harmony pad, and selected material will not exceed $5. 16 assignments.

Course 51, Theory and Practice of Grade School Music, is planned for the teacher who has had little or no training in the teaching of music to children. The course is accepted as a methods course in music toward the state teachers' license.

Instruction Fee, $10. Texts, $2.80. 16 assignments.

The above two courses are especially valuable in counties where at present no provision is made for music supervisors.

Course 25, The School Lunch, is intended to meet the needs of the teacher who plans to have a warm dish in her school at noon. In connection with the selection, preparation, and serving of this dish it is possible to teach some of the standards of health. The course is particularly useful for rural teachers.

Instruction Fee, $5. Text, $1.60. Materials, $.40. 8 assignments.

NOTE: Textbooks may be rented from the Extension Division, if desired, at one-third the purchase price.

For application blanks apply to your County Superintendent, the University Extension Representative in your district, or the University Extension Division, 314 Extension Building, Madison, Wis.
